

Reflection on the 5th East Asia Junior Workshop, 2013

SHIH Meng-Chieh, National Taiwan University

The first part is about the field works:

The field works contained many deep context about the Japanese society, and I really appreciated this chance because I might not experience these. I like visiting the nursing home because I am interested in the issue of the elderly, and this chance made us to visit the real institution in Japan. Although Japan's elderly-caring system is complicated, I have learned a lot from this experience. The Japanese students are very kind and help us on many aspects, and I really appreciate them.

And the following is workshop's part:

Student's presentations are very good and interesting. And the most important is that I learned other countries' cases and society issues. Korea, Japan and Taiwan are in a close relationship, and from others' presentations, I found that we have many things alike and also some are different. It was very interesting to know other students from different countries and what they were interested in. This was a very precious experience and thank you all for these wonderful days.
